A Very Important Day

All over New York City families and friends were waking up early. It was a very important day (for, uh, money) all of them. When they looked (go, successful, outside) they all saw the same thing: (ugly, it, wander) was snowing.

For some people, like (raspy, Veena, expansion) from India and Kiki from Greece, (want, it, bucket) was the first time they had (glamorous, system, seen) snow. For others, like Lev from (hilarious, Russia, repulsive) and Robert from Scotland, the snow (existence, reminded, bland) them of the countries they had (reading, come, cloud) from, everyone had to get up (that, get, wall) morning and travel downtown to do (something, glamorous, revolting) very important.

Some people took the (envious, subway, stone) to get downtown. Others rode the (profit, fierce, bus) or walked. One family even traveled (madly, skinny, on) a kind of boat called a (profit, stocking, ferry). Some people shoveled the snow while (others, book, line) played in it. And some families (ate, owe, flat) a special breakfast before they went (farm, basket, downtown), to celebrate this very important day.

(What, Fiction, Blush) was so important about this day? (wool, This, oven) was the day when all of (dirty, machine, these) people were going to become citizens (repair, near, of) the United States of America! They (attack, those, went) to a courthouse downtown for the (brake, ceremony, whispering). When they left, they were all (shoe, barring, U).S. citizens.
