

Grade 4.2.4 Wilson Fluency

A Very Important Day

win sta inch im snow fath out hap quick dow tion es por ing er side pen ly tant

window station inches important snowing
father outside happen quickly

Neila Batungbakal was too excited to sleep. She was looking out her window, listening to music, when she thought she saw snow! Sure enough, before long the station DJ came on. “It’s three A.M. here in New York City, and it’s snowing. Four to six inches are expected by noon.”

Nelia’s mind raced. Imagine, snow on such a very important day.
This would never happen in Mexico. Her son and daughter-in-law and the grandchildren were fast asleep.
She would need to awaken them early, to allow extra time for the trip downtown.

“Wake up, Miguel. It’s snowing,” Rosa Huerta called to her brother.
“There are at least two inches on the fire escape.”

“All right!” said Miguel, bounding from his room. He opened the window and scooped up some snow.

Neila Batungbakal was too excited to sleep. She was looking out her window, listening to music, when she thought she saw snow! Sure enough, before long the station DJ came on. “It’s three A.M. here in New York City, and it’s snowing. Four to six inches are expected by noon.”

Nelia’s mind raced. Imagine, snow on such a very important day. This would never happen in Mexico. Her son and daughter-in-law and the grandchildren were fast asleep. She would need to awaken them early, to allow extra time for the trip downtown.

“Wake up, Miguel. It’s snowing,” Rosa Huerta called to her brother.
“There are at least two inches on the fire escape.”

“All right!” said Miguel, bounding from his room. He opened the window and scooped up some snow.